THE SECOND YEAR

With the beginning of its second year, it is appropriate to review some of the merits and also some of the deficiencies of the Current List of Medical Literature. The advantage of providing an exhaustive survey of the progress of medicine is probably the greatest single value it possesses. Due to the completeness with which the literature is covered, there will be found in each issue many references which will be missed entirely if complete reliance is placed upon ordinary library resources. One enthusiastic subscriber writes that "from the first issue I obtained four references bearing directly upon my own course of research and the possibility is considerable that they would have been overlooked at least for some time."

The periodical literature of medicine is published so widely and under such varying conditions that there are comparatively few places in the world where it has been possible to collect any considerable part of it. One of these is the Army Medical Library of Washington where is assembled a nearly complete collection of modern medical literature. Due to this, the Current List is able to record the contents of many periodicals which are generally unavailable elsewhere.

The plan of recording in a uniform and compact manner the tables of contents of medical periodicals permits the subscriber to the Current List to keep informed of the latest communications upon a given subject. This is more convenient than the alternative of examining the journals themselves either in a library or by borrowing. The particular advantage of this plan is that the lists of titles can be kept for further reference at any time found most convenient.

A disadvantage of the Current List, from the standpoint of the individual who is interested only in certain portions of the original literature, is that it covers all phases of medical research. Furthermore, the subdivisions which from necessity have been made in accordance with the principal contents of the journals as indicated by their titles, are not sharply defined and do not contain all papers relating to a given subject group. For this reason it is necessary to search diligently among the titles collected under various subdivisions to find all papers upon a given subject. This is an inconvenience which can be

CURRENT LIST OF MEDICAL LITERATURE is published weekly and lists of RECENT BOOK ACQUISITIONS are issued several times per year as supplements. The subscription price for both is $5.00 per year in the United States and $5.50 per year in other countries. The Recent Book Acquisitions may be obtained separately at $1.00 per year. remedied only by classifying the papers themselves in place of the journals.

Although this would be a manifest advantage, there are certain inherent difficulties which render the prospect of success rather uncertain. These arise mostly from the impossibility of sharply limiting the subject groups and definitely assigning each paper to its proper subdivision of medical research. Decisions on these points will vary with the experience and individual needs of the persons who make them and cannot be expected to give universal satisfaction.

Although the plan of choosing the subject groups in accordance with the journals leaves much to be desired, it has the merit of economy and eliminates the personal factor in the choice of subject groups.

In an effort to improve the grouping of the journals hitherto made, the number of subdivisions of the literature recorded in the Current List has been increased from 44 to 50 and titles have been chosen which are more nearly in accord with the subject matter. It is hoped that this improvement will prove helpful to those who will make use of the publication in the coming year.

Finally, it may be mentioned that work is in progress on an index of titles in the Current List recorded from journals which are not used in the compilation of the Quarterly Cumulative Index Medicus. For this reason the binding of Volume 1 should be delayed until this index is completed. It is probable that from now on an index to the entire contents of the Current List will be made. This should greatly extend the period of usefulness of the publication.
